Payment Information

The Quarterly Physics Review charges the following fees to cover the cost, associated with peer-review and publication. The following fee information applies to all article types, including case reports and invited reviews. As the QPR is a newer journal, it is unfortunately not possible to waive the publication costs for all invited submissions.

*The Editorial Board may reduce or waive the publication fee of a submission on a case by case basis.

- Submission fee ($100) – due upon submission of the article, used to cover the costs for the peer-review process.

Please select one:

- If this manuscript is accepted, my institution or the institution of one of my co-authors can provide funding for the payment of the publication fee of this paper, OR I or my co-authors has grant funding that can be used for the payment of the publication fee. ($2700)

- If this manuscript is accepted, I or my co-authors will be paying the publication fee using personal funds, and will not be reimbursed by any institution. ($1125)
- Pay fees into escrow upfront and save 10% - shorter turnaround, no publishing delays
Fees must be paid by check or wire transfer 2 or more weeks before submission. Payment will be held in escrow, up until the acceptance of the paper for publication. In case the paper is submitted and then rejected in peer review, or if for any reason the journal fails to publish the accepted paper, a full refund will be issued. Because of the nature of electronic files, refunds are not possible after publication, or for any reason not stated above.

A discounted publication fee of $150 has been arranged for peer-review and publication
